

I D I O M S

PART 8

bridge the gap

🎯 “Bridge the gap” means to reduce or eliminate a difference or disconnect between two things—such as ideas, groups, levels of knowledge, or situations

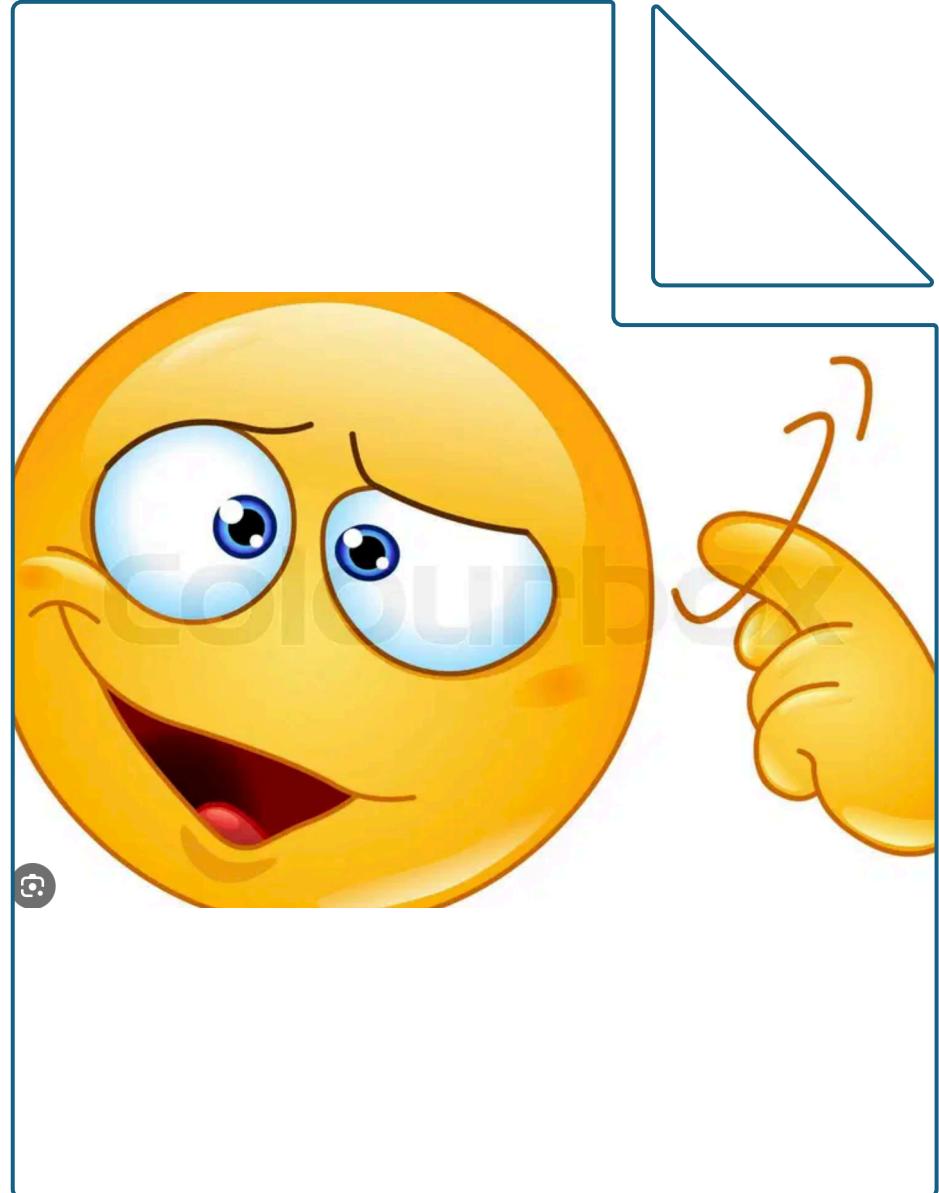

Ex: The new training program helps bridge the gap between experienced employees and newcomers.

be out of your mind

🎯 is an informal expression that means to be acting in a way that seems irrational, unreasonable, or crazy—either literally or jokingly.

Ex: He must be out of his mind to quit his job without another one lined up.

MAKE A GO OF STH

🎯 “Make a go of something” means to try to succeed at something, usually through effort, determination, or hard work. It's often used when someone is attempting something challenging or new.

Ex: She moved to the city to make a go of her photography business.

give in your notice

🎯 to formally tell your employer that you are going to quit your job

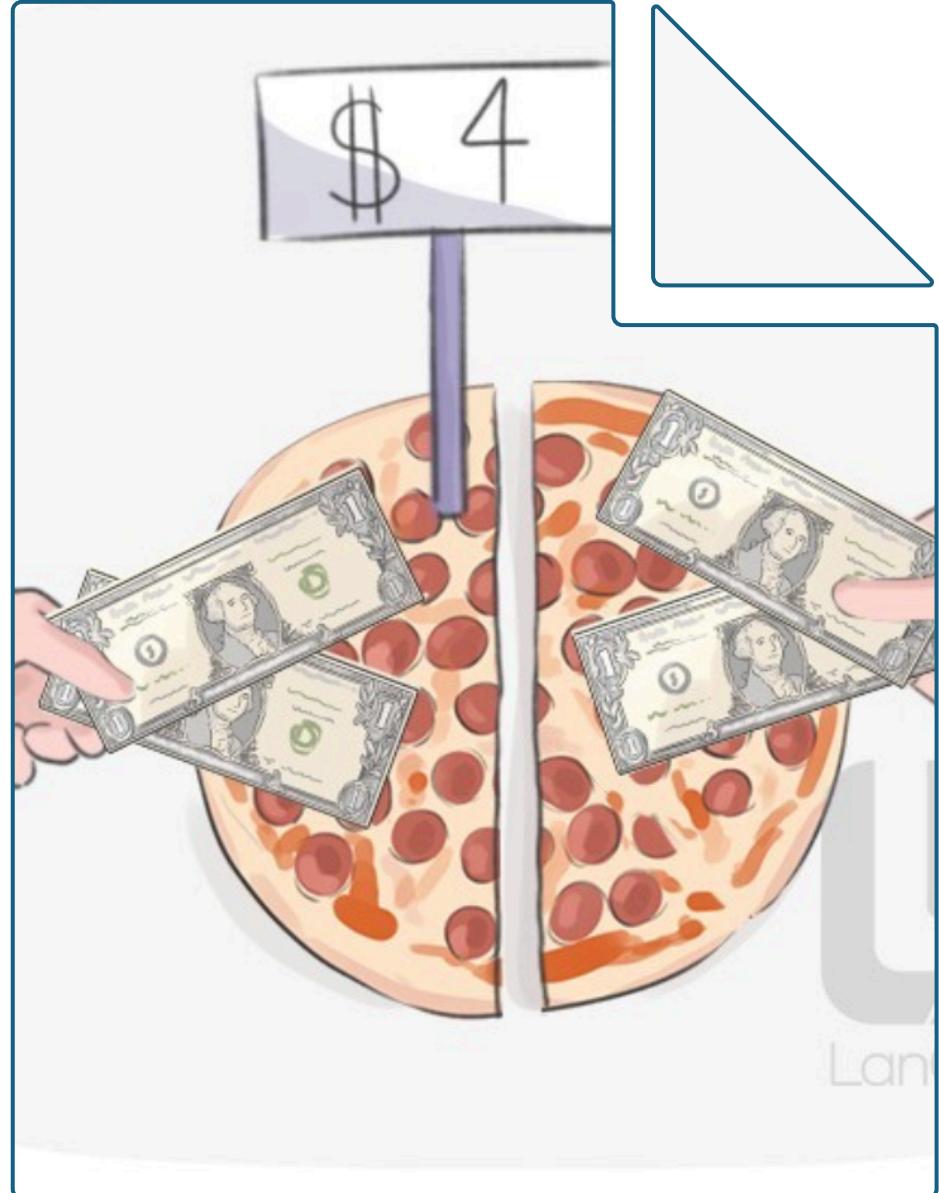

Ex: She gave in her notice yesterday because she found a new job.

go halves

🎯 to share the cost of something equally—each person pays half.

Ex: Let's go halves on the pizza

never in a million years

🎯 “absolutely never” or
“it is extremely unlikely to happen.

Ex: She said she'd never in a million years move to the countryside.

packed in like sardines

🎯 being crowded very tightly together, with very little space —just like sardines tightly packed in a can.

Ex: The subway was so full that we were packed in like sardines.

Hit the nail on the head

🎯 to say or do exactly the right thing, or to describe a situation or problem with perfect accuracy.

Ex: He really hit the nail on the head with his analysis of the project.

in the open air

🎯 outside, outdoors, or not inside a building.

Ex: We decided to eat
in the open air
because the weather was nice.

jump the queue

🎯 to move ahead of others who are waiting before you, instead of waiting your turn.
It is considered rude or unfair.

Ex: People were annoyed because some tourists jumped the queue at the ticket booth.

